

Abstract

Compositions and methods for detection of estrogen receptor- β in human tissues are provided. The compositions are monoclonal antibodies specific for estrogen receptor- β binding. The method provided is a prognostic method and/or a predictive assay for cancer, including breast cancer. The assay provided uses a estrogen receptor- β antibody that has both high affinity and specificity and can be used in archival tissue sections.